

Dr. Juvann Wolff, MN, ARNP

Director of the Center for Excellence in Nursing Education, University of Washington

Juvann Wolff, M.N., ARNP, is a graduate of Seattle University (1976) and the University of Washington (1983) and is nationally certified as a Family Nurse Practitioner. After 22 years in primary care practice, Juvann joined the faculty at the University of Washington and was appointed the Director of the Center for Excellence in Nursing Education in the School of Nursing. She has innovatively moved the School of Nursing "Learning Lab" into a uniquely blended lab and simulation center, utilizing low and high fidelity manikins to augment and enhance the nursing curriculum for both undergraduate and graduate study.

Ms. Wolff is a retired Navy Captain with 30 years total of military service, including 3 years of active duty Air Force, 10 years of Air Force Reserve as a Flight Nurse, instructor and examiner, followed by 17 years in the US Navy Reserve. Currently, in addition to her full time work at the University of Washington, she works in an urgent care clinic and volunteers in an underserved community clinic. In her free time, she gardens and is learning to play golf.
